

Anca Simion

Currently, I am a lecturer at the Faculty of Psychology and Educational Sciences, Babeş-Bolyai University, Cluj-Napoca. I have had the opportunity to accumulate valuable experience throughout my professional career. I have a doctorate in Educational Sciences with the central theme of the thesis: the links between music and the socio-emotional development of children. I have a B.A. in music (piano) and educational sciences. I have been publishing papers on the development of social and emotional competences of primary school children incorporating music elements since 2013, with various papers indexed in journals and other conference proceedings. I believe that through integrating natural and social sciences, we can gain a holistic understanding of the interdependencies and feedback loops between human activities and the environment. This integrated approach allows us to identify leverage points—critical areas where interventions can have the greatest impact—and design targeted strategies for sustainable development.
